Hippocratic Oath

(adapted)

I solemnly promise, as a care provider, to practice my profession to the best of my ability. I will use my knowledge and skills to aid in the prevention, diagnosis, and effective treatment of diseases. I will try to help those in my care to understand disease, treatment, and prognosis.

I will encourage those I care for to participate in decisions relating to their lives. I will endeavor to alleviate their fears and recognize that occasionally the most meaningful treatment may be to listen with kindness and understanding.

I will treat others with dignity and will give to them the respect and privacy which I would hope to receive. I will keep other's trust and preserve confidentiality. I will understand that a person's sense of self-esteem is essential to good health.

I will value life even as I must also strive to understand the process of dying.

I will respect the wisdom of my teachers and will share my knowledge with others.

I will strive to further my education and develop habits that promote further intellectual growth.

I will be proud enough to practice to the best of my ability and remain humble enough to call for assistance when beneficial. I will encourage and cooperate with all others providing care so that they may perform their duties effectively and with consideration.

I will live for the good of people rather than for things. I desire that my empathy will never be subservient to skill and knowledge. I see my ability to be a gift to be shared with humanity.

Chinese Medicine Oath ~ Code of Conduct

(adapted from Dr. Sun Si Miao, Tang Dynasty)

I shall look upon those who have come to grief as if I myself have been struck, and sympathize with them deeply.

I shall not give way to wishes and desires, but first develop an attitude of compassion.

I shall not ponder over my own fortune or misfortune and thus preserve life and have compassion for it.

I shall not look with contempt on those afflicted but instead I will develop an attitude of sympathy and compassion.

I shall treat all patients alike, whether powerful or humble, rich or poor, old or young and not allow conditions of life keep me from helping whole-heartedly.

I shall maintain a dignified appearance and not speak prematurely, make fun of others, decide whether a patient's decision is right or wrong nor discuss the business of other people.

I shall not emphasize my reputation, belittle others or praise my own virtue.
